22nd International conference on biological inorganic chemistry

25–30 July 2027 | York, UK

Sponsorship menu

The International conference on biological and inorganic chemistry (ICBIC) is the premier international conference in the field of biological inorganic chemistry. Expected to attract 600–800 international delegates, ICBIC22 will showcase the very best international speakers and programme content, including cutting edge research and new and topical enabling tools across the following themes:

- Metalloproteins and metallonucleotides
- Metals in disease, diagnosis and therapy
- Metal homeostasis and metallomics
- Bioinspired models, catalysis and mechanism
- Synthetic/engineering metallobiology
- Energy, environment and sustainability
- AI/computation and other new tools for bioinorganic chemistry

ICBIC 2027 offers a unique opportunity to engage with a global community of leading academics and industry professionals in bioinorganic chemistry, from emerging young researchers to established scientists and departmental decision makers. The conference offers a range of sponsorship options designed to maximise visibility, networking, and brand impact.
